

Global Media Studies Undergraduate Symposium

The College of Wooster
March 29–30, 2019

globalmediasymposium.voices.wooster.edu

The College of Wooster invites submissions of undergraduate research on global film, television, and digital media, as well as digital media-based critical projects, for an undergraduate symposium. Participants will present their research in thematically organized panels, with faculty providing feedback, and digital media projects will be showcased throughout the symposium. Prizes will be awarded for the best written essay and best media project. All participants will be invited to attend an opening reception and a networking lunch featuring College of Wooster alumni and local professionals with careers in media studies and media production.

Call for Papers

Submissions of any critical research in global film, television, and digital media undertaken at the undergraduate level are welcomed. Given the timing of the conference, students are encouraged to submit:

- Completed essays from fall 2018 or spring 2018 classes
- Research in progress for spring 2019 classes
- Selections from senior capstone projects

Please submit your name and school affiliation, email address, 250-word abstract, and 3-5 bibliographic sources to bkies@wooster.edu no later than February 1, 2019.

Call for Digital Media-Based Projects

Submissions of media-based critical projects examining film, television, and digital media undertaken at the undergraduate level are welcomed. Possible projects may include:

- Videographic criticism
- Podcasts
- Websites featuring original research
- Other media-based critical work

Please submit your name, school affiliation, email address, 100-word description, and technical requirements to bkies@wooster.edu no later than February 1, 2019.
